English Electric Canberra

The English Electric Canberra was designed as a jet-powered replacement for the Mosquito and entered service with the RAF in 1951.

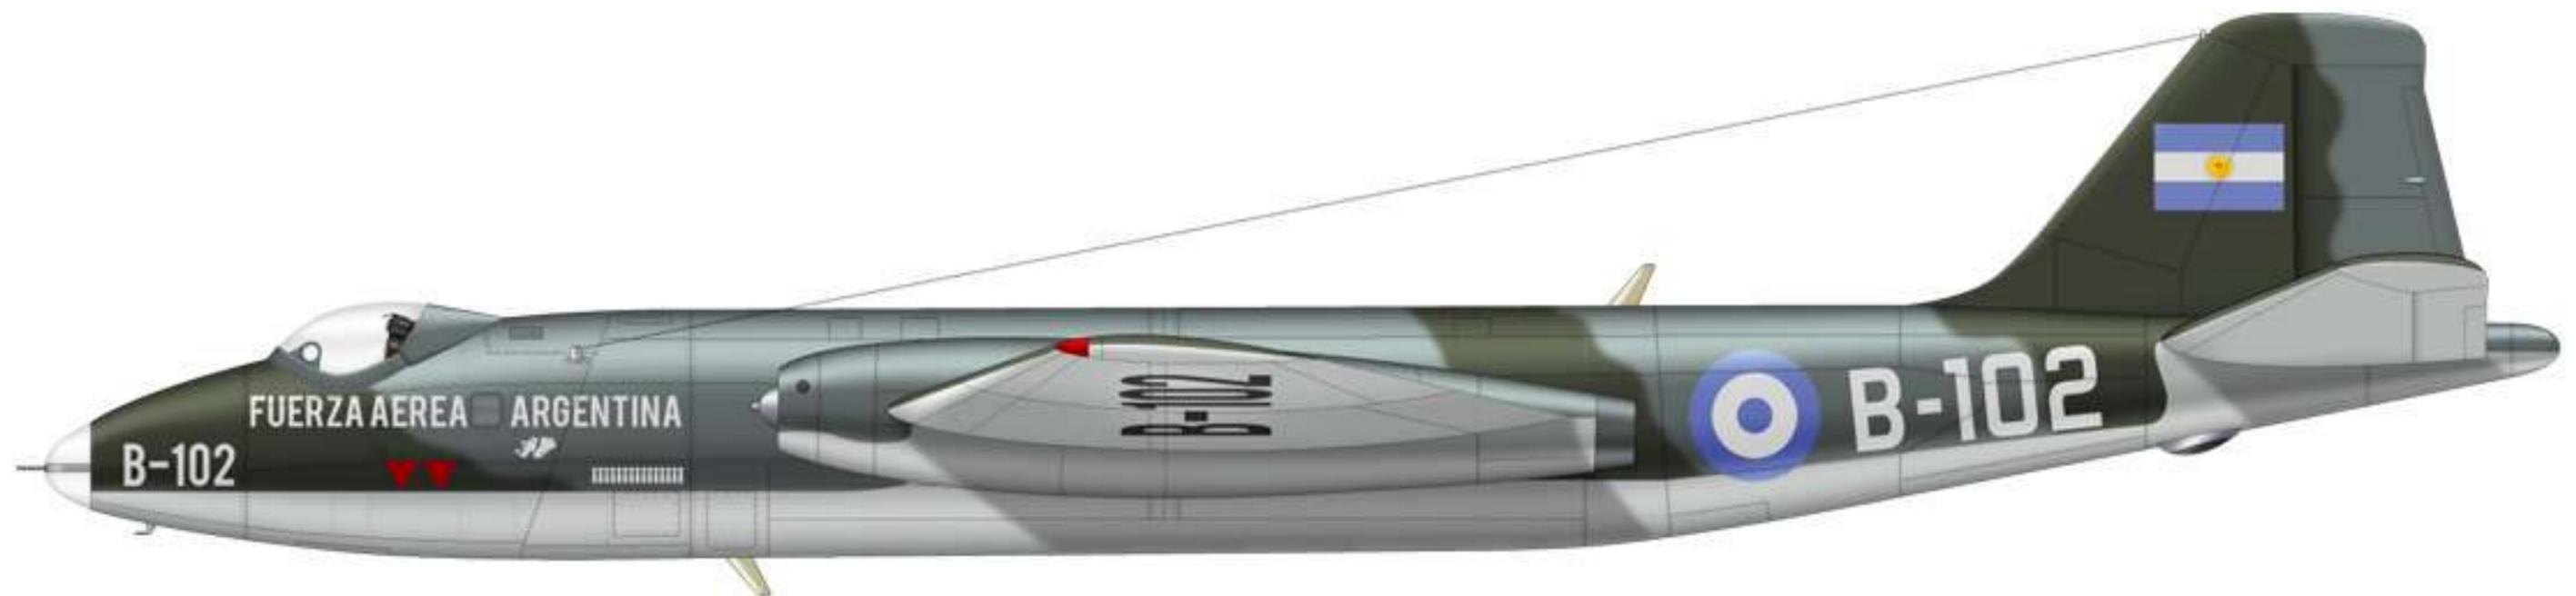

Although it was originally designed as a bomber, many variants were made including trainers, strike aircraft, electronic countermeasure, and photo reconnaissance.

It saw combat during the Suez Crisis, the Malayan Emergency, in Vietnam, Eritrea, Somalia, Rhodesia, South Africa, the Falklands and Afghanistan, covering 5 decades of service.

This example is an B (I) 8 of 16 Squadron RAF circa 1961.
